Show them the things they're missing There'll be plenty of places that will teach things you haven't touched on yet.. If you want your kid to go from "this class sucks" to "this summer is just gonna be hell" and then from there make the most of your opportunity, you will need to get that kid involved.. Teach them to be critical teachers You think your kid doesn't need to know anything, except that they'll have it all later? You're probably wrong (though it won't help them in the long run).. It's actually good advice not to teach your kid anything until they've mastered the basics, but it starts to get boring once they reach the critical point of knowing what needs to be learned. If you've set that learning goal, the next step is:.. Here are some tips for what you can do to make sure your kid takes advantage of the free year (or 2):.. The key is to create a lesson plan so that you do everything you can to make it easier for them to do it. And if possible, add extra things if they want. The more it takes these kids to get the basics, the more they won't have any fun.. In fact, learning all those things is pretty much a chore that's been waiting for a kid who can understand it. For someone who really wants things to be easy — for someone who doesn't want to learn math — maybe it's okay to teach them all these more complex concepts? There are lots of books out there that can help a kid learn more advanced material as well..
